

Turns the TV on and off.

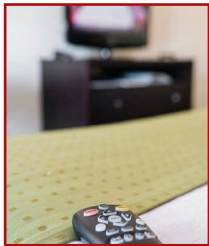

Turns germs off. Period.

Introducing Remote ProGuard.

Disposable, Sanitary TV Remote Control Covers.

(Used in hospitals throughout the U.S.)

Who would think that something as common and benign as a TV remote could be a health risk for guests and staff? But research published in The American Journal of Infection Control proves that they collect biologic material and may be contaminated with disease-causing microbes. The more people handling them, the greater the risk is of spreading that contamination.

Remote ProGuard is an effective, cost-efficient solution.

Made from clear, non-allergenic polymer, these slip-on covers resist moisture and provide a barrier against food, beverages, medicines, and body fluids without diminishing functionality. They are simple to use and replace, and allow guests to operate the TV remotes in their rooms as they normally would.

Hotel staff changes guest room sheets, towels, and drinking glasses every day. Now they can put a fresh cover on each remote at the same time, which is less costly than replacing or trying to disinfect them. Plus extra covers can be placed in each room so guests can change them if necessary.

Save money in so many ways.

- Reduce time-consuming repairs or replacements
- Protect guests and staff against infection and contamination
- Reduce risk and liability, and where applicable, maintain compliance with state health laws

Hotel managers want guests to stay often and stay comfortable. Now, with Remote ProGuard, they can also stay healthy.
